

Chase's

STATE OF TEXAS, COUNTY OF TARRANT.

Know All Men by These Presents--That I have this day bargained, sold and delivered to the CHASE TRADING COMPANY, for the sum of FIFTEEN THOUSAND FIVE HUNDRED AND TWENTY-FIVE DOLLARS, to me paid, the ENTIRE STOCK OF MERCHANDISE formerly known as the Chase & Samuel store, the title to which I warrant and defend.

W. T. MADDOX, Sheriff.
By R. H. TUCKER, Deputy.

We are now engaged in marking down this fine stock of goods, and, upon Monday, August 19th, the entire lot will be offered for sale at our store on Houston street at about one-half the retail price. It is a big thing for the public of Fort Worth to get these goods at the low prices we intend to sell them.

A Blind Man's Life.

(N. C. Journal-Observer.)
The old blind man who has made his name on our streets with a cane in which is packed a collection of rags, battered tinware and other things going to make up his store of household goods, is a slow coach, but one. Two years ago he entered the grounds of North Carolina from Virginia, and has since been working his way through to South Carolina. He arrived on the 6th of July, and consequently been on the road that place to Charlotte, a distance of twenty-one miles, one day. He tumbled off the train at Rocky River, and a traveler came along the blind man was seen up to his armpits in rags, feeling about with a long stick. The old fellow takes the line over his shoulders, and almost ungainly object himself, nothing of the looks of his cart, straggling the roads with runaway horses all the way from here to Virginia. Of course he can never see the way he does, but ever and anon he hears some one shouting: "Whoa," followed by the wild tramping of a horse's feet and the rattle of wheels, and then he knows the road is clear ahead of him.

Father Who Forgot His Baby.

(Chicago Herald.)
We find a great many things, as a conductor, as he looked over the contents of a lady's purse which he found in a seat in the next car. "What do you do with them?" "I throw them away," said the conductor. "You are always a fuss kicked up," said the conductor. "I generally find owners for them. Yes, many people are very careless when traveling. They leave a lot of things in the cars--cans, umbrellas, etc. I suppose you have heard the old yarn about the man who got on the train and felt as if he had forgotten something. After he had started, you remember, he began to think he'd left his suitcase sitting in the depot sitting room. Well, I had a case about as bad as that last night. A man and woman put their things behind them, and when they reached their destination a lot of things met them and carried off their things and trunks, but everybody forgot the baby. A telegram caught us at the next station, and the agent took the little chap until the careless father came with a buggy. Some people would forget their heads if they weren't fastened on."

John Brown's grave at North Elba, N. Y., is close by the old, weathered farm house that was once his home. It is in a corner of the door, and fenced off by a white paling, the gate of which is carefully locked. In like manner the tomb is covered by a wooden box chained and pad-locked to the ground. When this is removed one sees a blue stone, with the record of the death of Brown, his father and three sons. At the foot of the grave stands a huge boulder, into which are deeply cut the letters, "John Brown, 1859."
